

Section 001

Trey Craig-Gray

Sean Sumida

Oda Libaek

Noelle Nakaoka

Kaeden Abellera

James Green III

The treat would be low for a new private school and it would take a lot of funding to start a private school.

The bargaining power of buyers would be high because of the high cost of tuition and a lot of competitors

The threat of substitute would be high depending on the level of education at that school vs other schools and the general cost of admissions would go up across private schools and if some changed the other schools would cause an imbalance

The threat of the supplier would be high depending on the level of education provided.

The intra industry rivalry is medium because there are numerous competitors with other private schools and public schools